James Hoban: Architect of the White House
Exhibition on Display Honoring Irish-American Heritage Month

Discover an Irish-American link to the White House this month by visiting the White House Visitor Center for an exhibition entitled James Hoban: Architect of the White House. The Irish-born Hoban was selected by President George Washington to design the White House.

The nine-panel exhibition looks at the many facets of James Hoban. Learn about the famous architect through panels that include information about his Irish Roots; Life and Work in Charleston, South Carolina; the Building and Rebuilding of the White House; Developer in the Nation's Capital; and his Family Life and Civic Contributions.
